"Fitness For Your Future"

"Fitness for Your Future" is the theme of the Second Lynchburg Regional Health Forum to be held in the Auditorium of the Virginia Baptist Hospital in Lynchburg at 10:00 a.m. on, Wednesday, October 11. The Forum is being co-sponsored by the State Women's Committee of the Virginia Farm Bureau Federation and the Virginia Council on Health and Medical Care.

"Understanding Arthritis" is the topic to be presented by Dr. John Staige Davis, IV. Dr. Davis, a rheumatologist, is an Associate Professor of Internal Medicine at the School of Medicine at the University of Virginia in Charlottesville. Miss Louise Wiedmer, R.N. will talk on "Foods for Fitness." Miss Wiedmer is the Nure Specialist in Geriatrics at the Instructive Visiting Nurse Association in Richmond. The two speakers will be introduced by Mrs. Charles E. Farris of Rustburg who will preside during the Forum, representing the State Women's Committee of the Virginia Farm Bureau Federation.

Mrs. R. K. Martin of Pamplin, Chairman of the Greater Lynchburg Regional Forum, will bring greetings from the Farm Bureau. Edgar J. Fisher, Jr., Director of the Virginia Council on Health and Medical

County Departments Attend Workshop

The first in a series of workshops was held at Randolph-Macon Woman's College on September 21, for representatives of Appomattox County Health Department, Welfare Department, and Virginia Tech Extension Service. The workshop was designed to show new and innovative methods of communication and teaching health subjects. Representatives were also present from the other counties in Planning District XI and the City of Lynchburg.

The morning session was devoted to a skit and discussion on epilepsy. It is believed by our media specialist, Bette Winik, that people can learn skills and changes in attitudes as easily from dramatizations as they can from the printed or spoken word. Other communication mediae demonstrated for teaching health were: stories, games, video tape, radio, T.V., and dance.

Group discussion sessions were conducted by Ed Hamilton, University of Virginia; Dr. D. L. Warren, Lynchburg College; Mrs. Georgia Amowitz of Lynchburg; John Childrey, University of Virginia; and Dr. Jerry Moore, University of Virginia.

The purpose of the Workshop Program was to provide the participants with information on when and how to use various types of mediae in presenting health educational programs to individuals and groups. Mrs. Patricia Cormier, Health Educator for the Consumer Health Education Demonstration Project, spoke on "The Importance and Innovations in Health Education". The Workshop was coordinated by Bette Winik, Media Specialist for the Project. Others assisting were Mrs. Ocie Mack and Mr. Charlie Elliott, Extension Agents, responsible for assisting other Agents in the demonstration area of Planning Districts X, XI, and XIV, with programs relating to consumer health. Other workshops dealing with venereal diseases, sickle cell anemia, dental health, cutting medical costs, and family planning, will be planned and scheduled on a regular basis for persons with responsibility for carrying out the program of the Consumer Health Education Demonstration Project.

Care, will represent the Virginia Council. The Rev. James R. Bock of Forest Road United Methodist Church of Lynchburg will deliver the invocation.

The public is invited and encouraged to attend the Forum which will adjourn at 12:30 p.m.

Energy Crisis Ahead

From "The New York Times"

The repeated warnings that an energy crisis looms ahead for the United States are becoming ever harder to ignore. Interior Secretary Morton's report for 1971 adds new evidence. Partly because of the recession, United States power consumption last year grew by only a relatively modest 2.3 per cent, yet even that moderate gain required an increase of more than 25 per cent in oil imports.

If 1971 had been a boom year, energy demand might have leaped 5 to 6 per cent, and the long term average annual growth of this demand is generally expected to be 4 per cent. Meanwhile both the American Petroleum Institute and the American Gas Association have recently reported that proved United States reserves of both fuels declined last year. Current oil reserves in the lower 48 states are now at the lowest point in twenty years, while natural gas reserves are at the lowest level since 1957.

The oil and gas industry claims that higher prices would intensify prospecting and presumably lead to the discovery of additional deposits. It also wants increased freedom to do offshore drilling and is pressing for an Alaska pipeline to bring North Slope oil to the lower 48 states. There interests also warn of increasing dependence on imported fuel, with all the political dangers thatinvolves. Atomic energy enthusiasts, of course, call for more nuclear power plants and the removal of present obstacles to these installations. Fearing politically damaging power shortages this summer, the Nixon Administration is pressing Congress for emergency authority to license newly built nuclear power plants that have not fully satisfied the requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act.

In contrast, consumer and continued availability of the environmentalists have skill in retarding the power plants, fighting offshore forcing the nation to consider strip-mining.

What has been documented debate and the development is that the United States cannot enjoy limitless cheap exhaustint its domestic supply natural gas and without additional damage to the polluted environment.

In this dilemma, there seem more serious discussion of p retarding the growth of energy even of reducing it. In general fuel prices do not reflect environmental damage. additional tax on all fuel might discourage frivolous energy and provide funds for reconstruction.

Alternatively, the possibility faceid that eventually fuel will have to be rationed, perhaps upper limit per person or hou consumption. Or commercial buildings might be ration conditioning. None of these o to reduce energy demand is a Presidential election year but expect politicians to discuss issue conadifly.

But sooner or later the problem to be faced, and how well we depend on the extent of strict first limit on growth; it now ap the energy limit; as t meteorologically hot summer Yorkers and others will dem those limits are

Program Ideas For Garden Clubs

Blacksburg - As you approach the fall and winter season of garden club activity, are you concerned about assembling interesting programs for your group? Are you petrified when it is your turn to conduct a meeting or present a program?

If you have these problems, two of the bulletins from Virginia Tech can help you. These publications should be very useful to garden club members, and help them improve the quality of their meetings.

"Horticulture Programs for Garden Clubs" should be very useful in selecting interesting topics. Over 40 specific titles are given with brief comments on the main points which may be included in such programs.

The topics cover a rather wide range of subjects and are grouped under such categories as general horticulture, gardening, house plants and greenhouse, landscaping and conservation, plant materials, and special programs.

Of particular value may be the selection on resource materials for programs. About 50 books are cited, as well as some of the more useful magazines and periodicals. These may be secured at your local library or book store.

Three types of program material which are listed in this bulletin are available from the Extension agent in your county. These include publication, slide sets, motion picture films. They may be quite useful if you have trouble in locating the books and magazines.

"Planning and Presenting A Garden Club Talk" is the other publication which may help you with your programs this year. Actually, this is a popularized course in public speaking, condensed into a short bulletin. It has been written especially for garden club members, but offers useful suggestions for preparing a talk or report for any group. If you dread the prospect of presenting a program or talk, this material should be of real value to you.

The planning of your talk should include preparation, props, and presentation. Each of these items must receive your careful attention if your program is to be successful.

Preparation involves the selection of a topic which will be of interest to your particular group. You must also assemble the information you plan to convey to your audience. Proper preparation will give you confidence and ensure a successful program.

The use of props or visual aids is an important part of most garden club talks. Actual plants, pictures, or charts will add interest and increase the amount of information received by your audience. Be sure your props relate directly to your topic, and are large enough to be seen, even by those with less than perfect vision on the back row.

Your presentatino can be fun for you and your audience if you are well prepared and have interesting props. Present your talk with enthusiasm using only a few notes on small cards. This is much better than reading from a manuscript, which can be very boring.

These two publications may be secured from the Extension agent in your county. Their use should improve the interest level and value of your garden club programs.

How would you like it, if, just as you were about to sit down to a delicious dinner, the phone rang and you to to leave right then, without even so much as a bite? You wouldn't!! THEY don't either, but THEY go!

What about all the new TV programs that are coming on this fall? Pretty good aren't they? Suppose you had waited all week for that show -- it had just begun -- Yep, it's that phone again and you have to go. Very likely you'd really be stewing inside; well the guys and gals I'm thinking about don't like to miss their shows any more than you or I do, but THEY do and a lot of other things, too.

Who the heck are THEY??? THEY are our Appomattox County Volunteer Rescue Squad, that's who!! October is Rescue Squad month, and when that volunteer rings your bell or knocks at your door, welcome him and be prepared to give until it hurts and then reach back and find a little extra to give. THEY give gladly and willingly of themselves, their time, their talent and in every possible way so that when we give them an urgent call, whether it be in the middle of the night or middle of dinner, they're ready to go.

BEST TIP YET: DON'T START!

TIPS ON QUITTING CIGARETTES

1. Pick a Q (Quit) Day.
2. Switch to a low tar-nicotine brand, and begin to cut down BEFORE Q Day.
3. Keep a supply of substitutes handy: mints, gum, celery, carrot sticks.
4. Quit on Q Day; use substitutes when the urge to smoke is strong; keep busy; pamper yourself with special meals; drink plenty of water; exercise.
5. Renew your resolve daily. Think over the health hazards of cigarettes.
6. Plan a treat for yourself with the money you used to spend on cigarettes.
